Chamber Music for Piano and String Quartet

Resident concert pianist and artistic director of the Georgetown Bach Chorale, Ron Greidanus, will join together with a vibrant set of four string players in a salon concert of virtuosity, melody and passion. The evening will include Anton Arensky's rarely performed Piano Quintet in D Major and Chopin's stirring Piano Concerto in E Minor; a perfect way to see out the warmth of summer and welcome the coolness of autumn.

Bach's Christmas Oratorio Part One and Magnificat

The Georgetown Bach Chorale and Baroque soloists will perform Part One of Bach's Glorious Christmas Oratorio and his jubilant Magnificat, celebrating the birth of Christ. Although the Christmas Oratorio doesn't get as much recognition as its counterpart Handel's Messiah, it truly is a marvellous work and effectively sets the mood for Christmas.

Piano and Poetry

This late afternoon concert will feature the poetry of the great Edgar Allan Poe recited by Georgetown's own Vera MacDonald. Between these eerie creations Ron will entice us with the equally dramatic Etudes Tableaux Op. 39 of Sergei Rachmaninoff performed as only a true Russian specialist can. Following this display of words and music, a delicious spread of stews and cheeses will complete this concert.

Back in the most wonderful setting for a cappella music, the Chorale returns to the Croatian Centre for an afternoon of vocal gems. Violinists extraordinaire, Edwin Huizinga and Chris Verrette, two virtuosos who perform regularly with Tafelmusik, will be featured in what promises to be a dynamic rendition of Vivaldi's most popular concerti. The Chorale will perform equally stirring choral works for double chamber choir and strings including Vivaldi's Kyrie Eleison, Domine ad adiuvandum me festina, and Lauda Jerusalem. If you were at the Chorale's performance 3 years ago, you will not want to miss these "frenetically talented" artists.

Fauré's Requiem

Some of the world's most beautiful music has been written for this day of introspection and reflection. It was, in fact, on Good Friday 14 years ago that the Bach Chorale made its first appearance. This year, Fauré's sublime Requiem in D Minor as well as Vaughan Williams' Five Mystical Songs for Baritone will be offered to honour this contemplative day. Bob Knight, well known to our audiences will be our featured soloist. Light refreshments will follow in St. George's Hall.

From the Artistic Director

There is nothing like time away to help rejuvenate the soul and the mind for continued excellence and vision. Having just returned from a highly motivational series of rehearsals and concerts in St. John's, Newfoundland, both the choir and I are very excited to present to you this 14th season with 'new-found' energy and drive. Halton Hills was well represented at the Festival with three of the 21 choirs: Gaudeamus Children's Choir from Georgetown, Spurrel Studio Choir from Oakville, and the Georgetown Bach Chorale.

This bodes well for the future of music in Halton Hills!

Positive reinforcement from our supporters both near and far give us the impetus to offer classical music lovers and learners the marvellous, wonderful chorale and instrumental music which has been offered to us throughout the ages. As you will read in the Georgetown Bach Chorale's 2013/14 concert brochure, some wonderful new repertoire will be offered this season, including Bach's Magnificat and Part One of his Christmas Oratorio.

Dutch-Canadian violinist Edwin Huizinga will return with his usual intensity and flair in Vivaldi's Electric Four Seasons. Piano music of Chopin and Rachmaninoff, poetry of Edgar Allan Poe to Christmas in Manhattan, it doesn't get better. Come and enjoy great music with great people!
